DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 9-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention lacks patentable utility. The claims merely recite the presence of fields and their intended uses, but never produce a tangible result.

Furthermore, the language of the claims raises a question as to whether the claims are directed merely to an abstract idea that is not tied to a technological art, environment or machine which would result in a practical application producing a concrete, useful, and tangible result to form the basis of statutory subject matter under 35 U.S.C. 101.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Microsoft Corporation's MICROSOFT OUTLOOK 2000, hereinafter Outlook. See Fig. 1 for copyright and publication dates.

Regarding claims 1 and 9, at the "New Message" window shown in Fig. 2, Outlook teaches specifying addresses in a "To" field of an e-mail message. The large lower field is used to specify addresses to be removed from the "To" field. In Fig. 3, the addresses have been removed per the specification found in the large lower field. As is well known in the art, clicking the "Send" button in the upper-left corner of the New Message window sends the e-mail message to its desired recipients.

Regarding claims 2, 3, 10 and 11, it can be seen in Figs. 2 and 3 that addresses specified in the "Cc" and "Bcc" fields of the New Message window are subsequently removed per the specification found in the large lower field.

Regarding claims 4 and 5, Figs. 2 and 3 show the removal of a group list and an individually listed address.

Regarding claims 6, 7, 12 and 13, it can be seen in Figs. 2 and 3 that addresses have been removed from all address fields (the "To", "Cc", and "Bcc" fields), as per the specification found in the large lower field.

Regarding claims 8 and 14, at the New Message window shown in Fig. 2, Outlook teaches specifying addresses in the "To", "Cc" and "Bcc" fields of an e-mail message. The large lower field is used to specify addresses to be removed from the "To", "Cc" and "Bcc" fields. In Fig. 3, the addresses have been removed per the specification found in the large lower field. As is well known in the art, clicking the "Send" button in the upper-left corner of the New Message window sends the e-mail message to its desired recipients.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-14 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The prior art pertains to e-mail composition, selective addressing, and the state of the art in general.
